The Murder

On December 27, 2011, Betsy Faria was found dead in her home in Troy, Missouri. She had been stabbed multiple times in the neck and chest. Her husband, Russ Faria, called 911 and reported that he had found her body. Russ told police that he had been at work at the time of the murder, and that he had no idea who could have killed his wife.

Police quickly focused their investigation on Russ Faria. They noted that he had a history of domestic violence, and that he had been having an affair with another woman. Russ was also the beneficiary of Betsy's life insurance policy, which was worth $150,000.

In March 2012, Russ Faria was arrested and charged with Betsy's murder. He pleaded not guilty, and his trial began in October 2013. The prosecution's case against Russ was circumstantial, but it was enough to convince the jury to find him guilty. Russ was sentenced to life in prison without the possibility of parole.

The Appeals

Russ Faria never gave up hope that he would be exonerated. He filed multiple appeals, and in 2015, he was granted a new trial. The new trial was held in St. Charles County, Missouri, and this time, the jury found Russ not guilty.

The jury's verdict was a victory for Russ Faria, but it did not bring Betsy back. Russ has since remarried, and he is now a grandfather. He has also become an advocate for the wrongfully convicted, and he has worked to raise awareness of the problems with the criminal justice system.

The Real Killer

The true killer of Betsy Faria was Pam Hupp, a close friend of Betsy's. Hupp had a long history of lying and stealing, and she had even been convicted of fraud in the past. Hupp was also the beneficiary of a life insurance policy that Betsy had taken out on herself. The policy was worth $100,000, and Hupp was the only beneficiary.

In 2016, Hupp was arrested and charged with Betsy's murder. She pleaded not guilty, but she was convicted in 2018. Hupp was sentenced to life in prison without the possibility of parole.

Hupp's motive for killing Betsy was greed. She wanted to collect the money from Betsy's life insurance policies. Hupp also wanted to frame Russ Faria for the murder so that she could avoid being suspected herself.
